Title	Trail of Two Forests
Notes	With proper planning, this activity may also fulfill 5F & 5D. This activity may also fulfill Wolf 10C, Bear 10A, 12B, Webelos Traveler 3,4,5,8, & 9, and Naturalist 8, & 10. The two forests in question are separated in age by 2000 years, but they stand side by side. One forest is a lush, old-growth Douglas-fir and western red-cedar ecosystem that surrounds this boardwalk trail. The other is a young forest that was originally engulfed and consumed by the lava flows from an eruption of Mount St. Helens more than two millennia ago. The trees from that ancient forest are gone, and all that remains are the imprints left by their burning hulks in the cooling lava. The lava solidified faster than the trees burned, and as a result there are hollow impressions of trees engulfed by the river of rock. These three-dimensional imprints of trees are called lava casts-three-dimensional impressions in the rock-and this scenic loop trip offers plenty of opportunity to study them.
